1. DCID 1/2, "U.S. Intelligence Objectives and Priorities," 21 January 1972, provides for an annual review to ensure:

"(a) that major changes in the international situation or modification of U. S. national policy goals are reflected in objectives and assigned priorities; and (b) that the structure and format of the listing remain appropriate as a means of expressing U. S. intelligence needs."

2. In DCID 1/2, responsibility for conducting this annual review is assigned to the Deputy to the Director of Central Intelligence for National Intelligence Programs Evaluation (D/DCI/NIPE), whose title has since been changed to Deputy to the Director of Central Intelligence, Intelligence Community (D/DCI/IC).

3. It has been six months since the new directive became effective, and as a preparation for the annual review it is requested you obtain from all USIB participants their comments on the usefulness of the current DCID 1/2 and on how this directive could be improved as a medium for expressing basic substantive guidance for planning and programming U. S. intelligence efforts over a period of five years.

4. These comments should be as specific as possible and, in particular, should address the following questions:
